With her accommodation 3,000 passengers and her ship's comby, she marks an enormous advance on the old Adriatic, which was built 1872. The new vessel is based upon illnes of her sister ship, the Baltic, it is larger, handsomer, and represts the latest development in the liding of passenger vessels. She emdies a number of utilities not found any other vessel affort. Has Nine Steel Decks.

Has Nine Steel Decks.

She is divided into twelve waterlight compartments, and has nine steel decks. The double bottom extends through the whole length of the hull. The ship is very strongly framed, and the total number of plates used in the construction was close to 20,000, while the rivers used are estimated at 2,500,000. The anchors weigh about eight tons each, and are worked by powerful gear, the cables being 3% inches in diameter, and weighing about ninety tons.

In the first-class dining room 400 persons may be seated at the tables at one time.

The reading and writing room, on the boat deck, is also a picture gallery for the display of paintings of the linaginative school of Boucher, Bartologal and Ciprant. A large library of modern books is a feature of the ship.

The Lounge and Smoke Room.

The Lounge is another magnifleent public apartment, also situated on the boat deck. It is a place to enjoy cards, music, tea, coffee and smoking, and it is core it was said by one of the trustees that Mr. Clark had placed his resignation in the hands of the trustees, and that final action of the smoke room. mistake, but it is not for us to decide."

Other women of the congregation varied the "mistake" with adjectives. One discordant note was struck by Mrs. E. J. Thuring, wife of the sexton, who said that on wednesday evening she received a message from Rev. Clark to have her son bring the ministerial roops to the parsonage from the church, for which he would receive 25 cents. Mrs. Thuring seemed to think to-day that her son had thus been indirectly connected with the Corey wedding to her sorrow.

Quickly following the public denunciation of Mr. Clarks action by the Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, pastor of the Clinton Avenue Congregational Church, as published in The Evening World yesterday, there was a call for a meeting of the trustees of Clark's church. Dr. Hoynton's denunciation was only one of many that poured in to them, and it was determined to bring the matter to a focus without delay.

The trustees assembled at the home of the Rev. Mr. Clark, No. 47 Linnen street. The meeting was held behind closed doors, but at its close it was said by one of the trustees that Mr. Clark
